Heavy Fire in New York.

NEW YORK, September 8.—A fire broke out on the north side of the Manhattan market which occupied the block extending from 10th avenue to North river and between 34th and 35th street. The fire occurred in the basement of Robe Bros. provision dealers, and spread rapidly, and the whole building was soon wrapped in flames. Alarm after alarm was sent out and a large number of engines were brought to the spot, but it was soon evident the entire building would be destroyed, as a strong south wind that was blowing swept everything before it. It is thought only the iron frames of the building will be left. There is about 200 stands in the building which will be a loss to the stand owners of about $5,000 each, making an aggregate loss to them alone of $1,000,000. The loss on the building will be very heavy, but it could not learned. Michael Dotson who occupied a part of the market as a slaughter house will also lose very heavy. Sparks were carried by the wind to the large hay establishment of T. T. Clarke on the south side of 34th and facing the market, and this, with a number of surrounding stores and the Hay Market hotel, took fire. At 2 15 this morning the fire is still burning. It is now believed to be under control.

Indian Depredations.

SANTA FE, September 8.—Last Monday evening a coach from Mesilla to Silver City was taken in by the Apaches' sixteen miles from Fort Cummings, the headquarters of General Buell. They killed the driver, Isaac Leihan, and two other persons, Isaac Ciberth, of New York, and Emery S. Madden, son of Captain David Madden of the 6th cavalary. The Indians doing this were said by Colonel Buell, in a report to General Hatch, to be Mascelero Apaches of Victorio's band who had broken through Buell's line and avoided his Indian scouts, afraid to stay longer in Mexico. Crossing the line the band attacked the sargeant of the 9th cavalry with a detatchment at Aqua Chiquita, wounding two soldiers. Hearing of the attack on the stage Buell sent out Captain Parker with a company of the 9th cavalary and his own company in pursuit, and his infantry to support. The Indians ambushed the troops and killed one soldier of the 9th cavalry and two Indian scouts, after which they again retreated in the direction of Mexico. Buell reported all water holes poisoned by Indians.

MESILLA, N. M., Sept. 8—This, Wednesday morning, General Buell sent out for the bodies of the men slaughtered near Fort Cummings and at 2 o'clock this afternoon the Apaches attacked the cavalry, killing one soldier and wounding two. Buell rushed forward his whole force. Fighting commenced with the Indians in an open plain at 4 o'clock p. m. General Dudley is coming up with infantry.

The Presidential Party.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 8—A Carson City dispatch says the president and party have a reception at the capital this forenoon. The reception lasted three quarters of an hour. The party was met at the depot by the Carson Guards and a band. Mrs. Hayes received the ladies. About three thousand people attended the reception. A cabinet meeting was held on the train and General Miles at Fort Keogh, Dakota, was ordered to send "Peaceful Seven" farther south to the reservation. The party left for Lake Tahoe in five four in hands.

A Truckee despatch says Mr. Hayes and party left Carson for Lake Tahoe at 9:45 this morning. They were conveyed to Summit by coaches, escorted by leading citizens. At Summit the party took a narrow gauge for Glen Brook, where they arrived at half past twelve. All declared the ride thither the pleasantest and wildest they ever took. After lunch they boarded the steamer Mayflower and made a tour of the lake, arriving at Glen Brook at 4 o'clock. The boat was decorated with bunting, evergreens and flowers. On front of the pilot house was a wreath of evergreens and flowers in which was a large picture of the president. The president announced himself as highly pleased with all he had seen and said that he expected no more pleasurable time during his trip than he had enjoyed during the past day. He complimented the energy and perseverance of the people of this coast and predicted a brilliant future for it. As the train was pulling out, Mrs. Hayes was called for and appeared by the side of the president which elicited the wildest enthusiasm. At a quarter past six the train, consisting of seven cars, left for Sacramento.

About Newspapers.

SARATOGA, September 8.—At the social science association, J. M. Gregory, president of the Illinois state university, read a paper on American newspapers and American education. The American newspaper is the best index of the American life and fairest representation of the people. Whoever would form a correct estimate of the spirit, genius and life of Americans must study the newspapers. Our virtues, our vices, our thoughts, our principles, our politics, our trade, our push, our pride, our weakness, strength, errors, casualties, and civilization all are imaged in our innumerable periodical publications. The American newspaper has a rival on earth in volume and variety. Of its issue of more than eight thousand different papers each week from the newspaper press, more than a thousand million copies are circulated annually. They cover thought and interest in every department of business. Manufactures and trade has to be advertised. School, scientific, moral, educational, religious, political and charitable society organizations obtain newspapers devoted to their interests, and fill ed with their ideas.

But stating the number of newspapers does not tell the whole story. One must note well the great array of writers who help to fill their columns, editors, assistants, reporters, correspondents, critics, and contributors of all kinds which, paid and unpaid, includes a large proportion of the country. The best brains of the nation speaks through the newspapers. The latest and freshest thought of the people is to be sought in the last paper issued. The malice, fanaticism, folly, falsehood and fraud which mix with our daily life cannot be shut out from the paper, but truth, wisdom, practical sense, and love of public good, solid learning and courageous criticism are also in force in newspapers so that we may easily forget the bad element which might be with them.

It is the business of social science to take account of all great public forces, to make out their exact character and tendencies, and to learn their amount and direction of power for good or evil. The newspaper is at once the product and exponent of the American mind, no better no worse. The good probably exceeds the bad in newspapers in a larger proportion than among the people, for vices seek seclusion not publicity. In no other country does the newspaper exercise such a power as in America. Americans live, work, and think through the newspaper acting as a public conscience. It places its seal of shame or honor upon each chapter of our history as it transpires. No American forgets it. It watches to reward good and punish bad. Good men trust it and bad men fear it. The power of a newspaper is not the mere force of printed thought, it is the embodied power of the public life of each day.

The reader feels that he is surrounded by an unseen multitude who are reading the same lines, and he grows excited with the imagined responses. All the forces of current history prove themselves through the press. Force never remains idle. It is impossible so gigantic a power as the American newspaper should exist without exciting a corresponding influence upon the character of the affairs and destinies of the entire people. All things educate or, county, climate, scenery and society, business and pleasures and environment exert a power on our minds and characters. While few have deeply considered the depth and extent of the influences of a newspaper, few will deny it. A free press is a necessary, compliment of free schools. Without schools the press would lack readers. Without the press, scholarship would fall of half its uses. A newspaper is the public agent. It offers to people for pay certain services, and on this work as advertising agent and public herald it depends for support. But to reckon it only as a public enterprise would insult public intelligence, as much as it would trifle with public interests and rights. In its public character the paper enters into the ranks of the world's factors, culture or discipline and knowledge. The one comes by exercise or training, the other by whatever furnishes information, by reflection, and most of all by reading. With all the schools we could name, be an intelligent people without newspapers. They are the people's libraries, the encyclopedia of millions. Scholars and professional men must read books, but woe, woe, woe to them if they read not the newspapers. Even the fragmentary and ephemeral character of its articles lend additional charms, if not additional utility to it. The freshness and variety of its articles lure the reader on. It talks to them of their business, their political party, their church and themselves. The men it describes are their contemporaries their neighbors. It thus adds something of dignity to their daily lives. The newspaper of to day chronicles the movements of thought as well as those of man and nations. All find place in these perpetual schools and text books of popular learning. Facts will sustain the estimate of the educating power of the newspaper. Other things being equal, the man or family who takes and reads a good newspaper will be more intelligent than his neighbors who do not. Sift from the American people the reading voters, and the remainder will be found the best read and most intelligent population of the globe. The newspaper is not an advocate or a substitute for school, but a compliment to them. The American press, directed by men of educational minds, will find their way to the school room. The scholars will be taught their use, and furnish them more interested and intelligent readers. Let the gigantic force of the newspaper be turned upon works of popular education; let schools introduce this new text book, and we have at work an agency never surpassed to make an enlightened and free people.

At the close, Mr. Higginson, who presided, made a few remarks of adverse criticism and called upon Moncure D. Conway to tell something of English newspapers. Mr. Conway said the English papers are better printed than American ones and also on better paper. American papers use too fine type.

Dr. Gregory defended the American papers and says he could buy more good reading for five cents than was contained in the London Times which costs more.

Home life in some of its relations to schools was read by Miss Mary W. Hinman, of La Porte, Indiana.

Bulldozing Attempted.

WHEELING, September 8.—The democrats made a dreadful attempt to break up a republican meeting at Ripley, West Virginia, yesterday. They played with the band before the doors, yelled and made every sort of noise and finally tried to get up a fight. They were foiled in every attempt, the republicans retaining their self control and waiting calmly for them to subside, which they finally did.

Meeting of the Prohibitionists.

WORCESTER, Mass., September 8 The prohibitionists met in state convention to day. Over two hundred delegates were present, half women. L. L. Lothrop, chairman of the state central committee, in calling the convention to order, predicted the defeat of the republican party in the presidential contest. The sentiment was received with great applause. Rev. A. A. Miner, permanent president, in his address condensed the record and policy of both the leading parties, declaring in favor of an independent third party on local, state and national questions. The resolutions pronounce for woman suffrage, endorse Neal Dow for president, Charles Adjuny, governor and a full list of state officers.

Panama Canal Business.

NEW YORK, September 8.—The Times thinks the minimum estimate of 1,600,000 tons as the limit of business for the the Panama canal a very liberal one and that in no distant future the amount would be less, rather than greater than this sum. That this aggregate tonnage would be sufficient to pay those who venture to build the canal does not seem at all probable. Admitting the possibility of fixing the tariff at the extreme rate of three dollars per ton, the canal company's income would be only $38,000,000, or less than five per cent. on the investment, and this without deducting anything for running and incidental expenses.

The Riflemen.

CREEDMOOR, L. I., September 8.—The Pacific team yesterday in the first regular practice since their arrival made 1,010 points. Several of the most reliable shots were out of condition. Want of ambition and rain have delayed practice, and the extreme heat for four days has had its effects upon the team.

FOREIGN.

Terrible Fire.

UPTON, QUEBEC, September 8.—One of the most terrible occurrences in the history of this section of the country was a fire which swept through a portion of this village Monday, carrying ruin and death in its track, both of man and beast. Bush fires had been numerous for some time and little attention was given them. The high winds Monday fanned the flames until the inhabitants about three o'clock saw with dismay a wall of flames coming toward them with a steady sweep as fast as a man could run, and swallowing up everything in its course. By four o'clock the first farm house had been reached. The fire ran along rail fences burning grain and the wind sent sparks in all directions. So quickly was a farm house enveloped that the men, women and children had barely time to escape out of its line. As night drew on, the flames increased in volume while the wind also grew strong and for a space of about 22 miles in length and in width three to four miles, the eye rested upon nothing but roaring flames. Families came flying into the village proper shivering in scanty dress, children shrieked in their terror, cattle ran helter skelter, and many burned to death in the forest. After the forest was swept away and the smoke and flame was in one compact volume, some six miles long and measureless as far as the eye could see, as to the width, from St Helene, St. Germain St. Guillaume, and other roads came fugitives in some instances compelled to abandon vehicles and take to their horses' backs. Men were obliged to throw away their coats in order to save their lives. House after house and barns filled with the best crops known for years were licked up and when the fugitives were all counted it was found there were eleven persons missing, not one of whom it was thought would escape. But towards morning the most of them turned up.

The following persons were burned to death.

Peter Currier, aged 81.

Jas Currier, aged 28.

Pete Sphoie Currier, aged 16.

Favier Boisseau, is not expected to survive his burns.

It is certain some 75 families have been turned out, representing nearly 450 persons. It is feared the loss of life will be much greater.

A Terrible Accident.

CHICAGO, September 8. A News London special says: A terrible colliery explosion occurred at 2 o'clock this morning at Seaham pit, in Durham county, on the North sea, five miles south of Sunderland. At the time of the explosion two hundred and fifty men were in the pit, and from that time up to 11 o'clock all efforts to reach them were unsuccessful. Communication has, however, since been opened with a group of eighteen men who are safe. The greatest excitement prevails in the neighborhood, and the wives and families of the imprisoned and slaughtered miners surround the pit with loud cries and lamentations.

LONDON, September 8. An explosion in Seaham colliery occurred at 2.30 this morning. Straiton, a resident viewer, was soon on the spot, when he found that all three shafts of the mine were blocked. The cage being fastened in them, Straiton, with a rope around his body, descended to the main seam, heard the men talk, he thought about twenty. They are considered safe. There is no reason as yet to believe that the pit is on fire, but it is feared the bulk of the men were killed. Seventeen men who were in the pit at the time of the explosion are safe. The owner of Seaham mine furnished the following. The worst fears are for about one hundred and twenty men. The men known to be alive have not yet been reached owing to damages to the shafts by the explosion.

A dispatch from the Seaham colliery says the rescued now number sixty seven; but it is feared there were 230 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. Two corpse were brought to the surface at mid night, one of which was badly burned.

The Afghan War.

The solid south and 39 northern vote can elect Hancock.

Later reports show the republican victory in Vermont was overwhelming

The significance of the Vermont election is that Garfield will carry every northern state

Stuffing the ballot box with tissue ballots is now called in the south wild enthusiasm

General Ganahl said at Denver on Tuesday night that had Hancock not been at Gettysburg "there would have been in this land two republics divided discord and belligerent" Perhaps! But there is a better way of putting this. If the democratic party had had its way and if the republican party had not defended the union and the constitution, there would have been the two republics spoken of above.

The policy of the directors of the Chrysolite in ordering an immense output of ore is severely commented on by the Leadville papers. It is clearly a stock jobbing operation which is an injury to Leadville and the mine. Judicious criticism will prevent to some extent its having the intended effect. In this way Colorado can prevent the stock jobbers from injuring Leadville

The News claims that Garfield's utterances in favor of silver at the time of the passage of the Bland bill were insincere because he did not embody his views in some amendment instead of simply voting against the bill The reason of this is explained in the five minutes speech he was allowed to make when he said, "But no adequate discussion was allowed and we are permitted no opportunity so to amend the bill as 'to secure that equality'" The Bland bill in the three times it passed the house was under gag law which explains Mr Garfield's inaction

It was always treason to tamper with the coin of the realm, and this is what the demonetizers did What added to the infamy of their scheme was their "bimetallic devotion to silver," which led them to make it legal tender for less than five dollars, so that laborers could be compelled to take it, while striking down its money character for larger sums so that capitalists could not be forced to receive it [Sensation] — [Extract from General Ganahl's speech in Denver

When the gentleman made this speech he probably did not appreciate how exactly it fits the democratic party In 1853 the democratic party passed an act making all silver coins under a dollar legal tender for only five dollars, though before this they were a legal tender for all debts of any amount The democratic party were the first to make silver a subsidiary coin. It may be urged that this applied only to coins under a dollar, but this was the only silver coined. Up to that time we had coined $8 045 838 in the standard dollars and $130 907 248 in coins less than a dollar. So this democratic measure took away the legal tender quality above $5 of $131,000,000 of the $139 000 000 of silver we had coined up to 1853, and reduced it to a subsidiary coin. So according to General Ganahl the democratic party is treasonable and infamous

PURIFYING THE BALLOT

It is only in the south where the true balloting in the south that does not work well is the fact that there is a good deal of uneven... In keeping the votes of the different democratic candidates nearly equal For example in a precinct of 100 registered voters the state ticket may have 150 votes, and member of congress 1 000 This inconsistency looks queer, and is likely to reflect on the honesty of the ballot A southern paper has styled this excessive voting for any one candidate as "wild enthusiasm," which we think is good Alabama recently had a great deal of this wild enthusiasm This paper, the Jamesville (Fla) Sun, has suggested the following happy remedy for the difficulty which should be adopted in the interest of a "free ballot" for which democrats have contended so long and nobly —

One way to correct the excessive voting for county offices, which may grow out of the wild enthusiasm it is calculated to arouse or that may even occur by accident, would be for the inspectors of the county officers box to count the number of ballots, and if found to exceed the highest number cast for the state ticket to put the county officers' ballots again in the box, shake them up well and draw out and destroy the excess. No doubt some good fellow really elected will lose his election by this method but there is no other way known to the law by which, an error in casting too many votes to the number of voters can be cured Of course a patriotic man who puts himself out as a candidate simply for the purpose of effectively exerting his influence to get his personal friends to the polls to vote the state ticket, will submit to defeat anyhow with great satisfaction If he secures the higher end of his patriotic impulse it will be reward enough and he will be supremely happy.

Again there may be some complaint because the number of ballots cast may be in excess of the number voting It is frequently necessary for the election of democratic candidates that this should be the case As for example in a precinct of 200 voters where 150 of them are republicans it is essential that over 300 votes should be cast in order to have what General Hancock has styled a "free ballot in order to make the election of democratic candidates sure Now while our democratic friends in the south who love a free ballot," feel it in the interest of pure elections to cast this necessary excess of votes, they also propose to right this wrong by drawing from the ballot box all in excess of the registered vote As the republican tickets are easily distinguished from the democratic tickets, it will be easy to draw the excess from the box entirely in republican tickets and thus the democratic party can still obviate the inconsistency and preserve the purity of the ballot box at the same time

These plans are so original and so eminently subserve the ends of justice that it is to be regretted that they are preserved only in the unwritten law instead of being on the statute book. The law, however, is only needed in one part of the country, as in the north, outside of New York city, we are not troubled with this excessive voting or "wild enthusiasm,' and hence a general statute is not necessary. Besides it was the solid south which declared, "The right to a free ballot is a right preservative of all rights and must and shall be maintained in every part of the United States"

Death of Ouray.

'At a meeting of the citizens of Ouray, held at the court house on the evening of August 31st A. D 1880 in pursuance of a call from the mayor to take action in regard to the death of Chief Ouray, the following resolutions embodying the sentiments of our people, were unanimously adopted

Resolved, first That it is with the deepest regret that we have heard of the death of the chief of the Confederated Utes, in honor of whom this town and county were named

Second, That in his character the late Indian Chief Ouray was a marked exception to all other men of his race, being a man possessed of keen perceptions, great judgement, fine instincts and a merciful disposition

Third, That in his death, not only the Indian tribes over whom he ruled, but all the citizens of this state have lost a steadfast friend and benefactor

Fourth, That his people were indebted to him for that good judgment which taught him that their interests were best subserved by keeping peace with the whites, and the citizens of this state are indebted solely to his influence and efforts that they were saved from suffering during the past year the horrors of an unprovoked Indian war

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to Chipeta, widow of deceased, each of the papers published in Ouray county, the Council Fire, published at Washington, D C, and the United States Indian agent at Los Pinos Agency.

Hancock gets all his reputation from General Order No 40 dated at New Orleans His latest ally, Butler, can also boast of a New Orleans order, General Order No. 7, we believe It related to treating the ladies of New Orleans as women of the town That set seems to be heavy on general orders. Equal Rights in Tennessee

When Foster Leech stood up in a crowd of negroes at the barbecue on Tuesday and announced that he would put them on the jury if they would elect him sheriff in the estimation of the masses of the solid substantial, intelligent citizens of Carroll county he fell like the mercury in a barometer. This concession to the demands of the negro to be placed upon juries is but one step towards the social equality of the races in Carroll county, "Slowly comes a hungry people," and little by little the negro has crept to his present position And we say he has gone far enough One drop of the white man's blood is purer and dearer to us than all the sluggish torrent that flows through the dark veins of Africa. So deep is the hatred of the radical leaders for democracy that they will make any concession to hold the negro vote, and we need not be surprised if in two years more they are knocking at the doors of our schoolhouses and churches and demanding admittance And when that day comes, will the republican leaders here dare refuse them? We think not They will silently acquiesce and bitter-thought it may be allow their fair haired little ones to eat from the same dish with kinky head picaninnies [Huntington (Tennessee) Vindicator.

Too Much Record

An incident of the campaign worth noting occurred at Macomb, Ills, during Governor Cullom's speech there the other day. The speaker made some allusions to Lyman Trumbull's former denunciations of the democratic party, when a venerable man in the audience arose and said

"Governor, may I interrupt you a moment?"

"Certainly," replied the governor

"Well sir," said he, "Senator Trumbull once spoke from that spot, within ten feet of where you are now standing, and he said in that speech that the democratic party was responsible for the death of men enough to make a corduroy road of their bodies from Macomb to Chicago"

The statement was corroborated by many present, and should stand of record as one of the many expressions of regard which Mr Trumbull uttered toward the party whose candidate he now is — [Chicago Inter Ocean

Old Abe the War Eagle the Hero of Thirty-Six Battles Who Takes in All the Tourists

Circulars giving the programme of the soldier reunion at Clinton were received yesterday Among the notables who will grace that occasion will be Old Abe the war eagle J C Harris the drum major of the barracks band at Columbus give a Press reporter a history of "Old Abe For the benefit of those of the rising generation who are not acquainted with it Abe said he was captured when an eaglet on the Flambeau river, Wisconsin, by an Indian who sold him to Daniel McCann for a bushel of corn He was purchased from McCann by company C of the 8th Wisconsin infantry then forming at Eau Claire and was carried by that company through the entire war, and was mustered out with the regiment at Demopolis, Ala September 5 1865. He was with the regiment in thirty-six battles and skirmishes and was once wounded At the battle of Corinth General Price gave explicit orders to capture the eagle dead or alive, saying that he would rather make him prisoner than an entire brigade of federals. During the battle Old Abe was carried between the regimental and U S colors at the head of the regiment.—He seemed to have a premonition of battle being always restless before the fight The boys, as they sat about the camp fires, would say "We are going to have a fight, Old Abe is excited" During a battle, old Abe would at times leave his perch and soar away over the battle field as if to take a fuller survey of the contending forces, never failing to return to his position beside the regimental colors. After being mustered out of service he was taken to Madison. Wisconsin, where he had a home in the basement of the state house An ex-soldier of the 2d Wisconsin infantry now has charge of him, and on the same perch on which he was carried through the southern campaign he now appears at the various soldiers re unions and was recently carried with outspread wings at the head of the grand procession at Columbus

Old Abe is nearly twenty years old and is a heavy burden for one man to carry. He is probably better known than any other bird in the world —[Cleveland Press

Adelaide Neilson's Legatee

Admiral Carr Glyn used to enjoy the distinction of being the Prince of Wales' best friend He is the brother of Lord Wolverton, the late liberal "whip," and the son of George Carr Glyn the well known London banker He saw a certain amount of service in his youth, winning a gold medal for work on the Danube under Omar Pasha, and being with the naval brigade at the bombardment of Sebastopol Since his wife's death, in 1870, he has devoted himself mainly to the pleasures of the town The same qualities that recommended Lord Alfred Paget to the Prince of Wales seem to have recommended Admiral Glyn To balls or routs, to Paris or Sandringham, "still they went coupled and inseperable" Before this, say the gossips, the gallant admirable, then a captain, had proposed to Miss Neilson, whose bright eyes used in those days to glance at many a fashionable supper table The prince remonstrated with his friend. Nobles had sometimes allied themselves with the stage, actresses had worthily worn coronets, great families might be traced back to the green rooms of the past, but The hiatus in the argument is said to have been instantly visible to Miss Neilson She refused the admiral's offer, and though he vowed that he valued her love above all the favors of princes and would fly with her beyond the confines of Mrs Grundy's social territory and behaved very much as any other good hearted, high spirited and very much facinated sailor would have behaved, she resolutely declined to marry him That she loved him her will would go far to show. But many people believe that she left no will at all [New York Herald.

The Piercy Combination will play "Deception" to night in Court House Hall. The combination comes from Baldwin's theatre, San Francisco, and is strictly first class.

During the week the following location certificates have been filed on lodes near Colorado City, viz.: A. L. Gwinn and A. L. Cassel on the Belle lode, Paul Smith on the Washington lode, J. A. Monahan on the Mastiff lode.

Chief Engineer Pixley is already making preparations for next seasons tournament Nevada avenue has been selected for the course and in order to have one fully equal to the one at Denver the avenue is being regraded and leveled with that purpose in view. It is evidently Engineer Pixley's intention to make the next season's tournament one of the most successful ones ever held in the state.

The case of Erickson versus Erickson, in a petition for divorce, occupied the attention of the county court yesterday, Judge Colburn presiding. Mr. Erickson was the petitioner and his wife the defendant. Mr. William Harrison appeared as counsel for the husband and Mr. John Murphy for the wife. The complainant alleged the infidelity of his wife as the ground of his petition. After the examination of several witnesses and a careful arguing by the attorneys, the jury agreed upon a verdict granting an absolute divorce.

One of Our Leading Industries.

Through the courtesy of Mr. John Courter we recently visited his brick yard which is located on Shook's run just east of the city. The constant demand for brick of a good quality prompted Mr. Courter in June last to secure the valuable clay land which flanks Shook's run upon each side and to establish thereon the necessary machinery for the manufacture of brick. Some time was occupied in the construction of the appliances needed for the work and as Mr. Courter's time was entirely occupied with his mason work in and about the city, he employed Mr. Quimby to carry the project into effect and proceed with the work.

Upon the occasion of our visit we found a much larger force of men engaged than we imagined were employed in any single business enterprise in Colorado Springs. Mr. Quimby, who has had a vast amount of experience in the manufacture of brick, kindly consented to render all the assistance within his power in explaining the manner in which the products of the yard were made. He first conducted us to the machines in which the clay is ground, of which there are five. Only two of them were in operation upon this occasion. The clay after being saturated with water is thrown into the grinders and thoroughly pulverized, from which it is taken in wheelbarrows to the moulding tables where a large number of men are constantly employed in moulding the bricks into squares. As fast as the moulds are filled they are carried by boys and dumped upon the level ground which adjoins the moulding tables where they are left until baked thoroughly hard by the sun.

The process of moulding is carried on very rapidly, and the men employed for that purpose are kept constantly on the move as are also the boys who are engaged in dumping. After the bricks have been sufficiently baked in the sun they are gathered up and piled in a large kiln each containing from 150,000 to 350,000 bricks. The piles are so arranged that large cavities are left beneath the pile in which the wood for burning them is placed. The fire after being started is kept up for two weeks, sometimes longer, during which time the bricks are subjected to heat sufficient to thoroughly bake them. When this is accomplished the outward courses of the kiln are removed, which leaves the bricks ready for the market.

Mr. Courter estimates the present capacity of his yard at about 25,000 per day and in order to turn out this amount it requires the services of about forty men. His clay is of a superior quality and there is an abundance of it in close proximity to his yard. In order to make sure that the supply would not run out he has recently purchased another tract of land adjoining the yard which now gives him possession of over twenty five acres of valuable material.

They have just finished burning a kiln containing over 350,000 bricks which are now being used in the construction of the opera house walls. The wood used for the burning is purchased on the Divide and is delivered upon the premises at a stipulated contract price. The amount of wood used is about 40 cords to every 100,000 bricks burned. The water used in the yard is conducted in a special two-inch pipe from the Pikes Peak main, the purchasing and laying of which alone was quite an expense to the proprietor, Mr. Courter. Taking it all in all the enterprise can be looked upon as one of great importance to the city's interests. It gives employment to 40 men not speaking of the many others who are engaged in furnishing the wood and transporting the brick. The money paid out is all spent in the city and in this way the merchants are benefitted.

Piercy's Combination.

The Piercy Combination from Baldwin's theatre, San Francisco, will appear this evening at Court House Hall in the play "Deception" written especially for Mr. Piercy. The last number of the New York Dramatic News gives a portrait of Mr. Piercy and states that the company will appear in that city this winter. For the last week the troupe have been playing in Denver to fine houses and have received the highest encomiums from the press. The facts that they come from Baldwin's theatre, and that they have an engagement in a first class house in New York are enough to recommend them as first-class artists, worthy of the patronage of our best people. They will remain with us two nights this and to-morrow evening and we hope they will be greeted with full houses. The Denver Tribune of yesterday speaks as follows of the company:

Another splendid audience greeted the Piercy party at the opera house last evening, "Diplomacy" being repeated. It was gratifying to observe that the fourth act was brought out with better effect and the weaker parts of the previous evening were given more strength. It is a splendid play, giving ample opportunity for the finished acting of which the company is capable. Last night's audience was less critical and more enthusiastic than that of Monday evening, and the party may be said to have captivated the house in the second act, and the interest was thoroughly sustained to the closing scene. The stage arrangements exhibited more taste and care than is usually devoted to properties, and the reception room scene was generally remarked for its elegance and completeness. The office scene was also well designed. Denver will not often be at liberty to attend a dramatic entertainment of so superior a character in every way.

HOT CAKES AND HOT SHOT.

Razors, Revolvers, Butcher Knives, but No Blood.

The Battle of Wanless' Block in Which No One is Hurt.

At an early hour yesterday while the guests at Pascoe's hotel were partaking of their morning repast, they were interrupted in the midst of their meal by an unusual disturbance in the kitchen of that hotel, and naturally a general stampede followed all being anxious to ascertain the cause thereof. It was at once seen that there was apparent discord between the inmates of that department, arising from a dispute between one of the waiters named Charles Reddy and Ambrose Ramsey, the pastry cook, over a plate of hot cakes, the two above mentioned having already had a slight scuffle.

The dispute was considerably hotter than the cakes by the time the guests appeared upon the the scene, and the two waiters were locked in anything but a fraternal embrace. Several rounds had taken place before the combatants were separated and a truce declared. The guests having satisfied their curiosity as to the cause of the disturbance, returned to the breakfast table and resumed the satisfaction of their appetites. The guests were progressing very satisfactorily in this laudible enterprise and had nearly accomplished their object, when a louder discussion than ever was heard in the kitchen. Another rush was made to the scene, and the beligerant waiter, Reddy, was beheld brandishing a razor, while the pastry cook stood on the defensive, wielding a large butcher knife. It was very evident to all that the affair of the hot cakes still rankled in the mind of Reddy. The two weapons of gleaming steel were hot crossed, however, for the spectators interfered before the duel could begin. Captain Groves, one of the proprietors of the hotel, thinking there was little prospect of a quiet life while both servants remained in the house, discharged Reddy and told him to depart in peace. Reddy departed, and once more the guests returned to their muttons.

The cessation of hostilities was only temporary. Reddy panted for revenge, and Captain Groves, deceived by the peaceful appearance of affairs, went down town on business. He was returning to his office about 9 o'clock, when Mr. William Bush, the baker, rushed out of his shop and informed the captain that the war had broken out once more. The captain rushed around to the rear of the hotel and found Reddy merrily pummelling his ancient enemy. Before Captain Groves' appearance, Reddy had chased his foe into the cellar, and in the darkness and retirement of that cool retreat had pounded and danced upon Ramsey until he had cried for quarter. Ramsey had arisen and retired to the sink to wash the blood from his face, and Reddy had stepped up to him and anxiously inquired if he had enough. Ramsey replied that he had quite enough, whereupon Reddy began another assault in force. It was at this stage of the proceedings that Capt. Graves appeared upon the scene. The captain took in the situation at a glance, and stepping up to Reddy gave him a blow upon the nose which knocked him down. Reddy picked himself up, ran about thirty feet and then turned with a revolver in his hand. He aimed the weapon at Captain Graves and fired. The ball missed its mark and buried itself in the wall of the new opera house. Captain Groves had no pistol, but Mr Thomas Wanless, who was one of the spectators of the melee had, and drawing it he let fly at Reddy. Reddy returned the compliment, neither ball doing any damage. Mr. Wanless returned the fire, and Reddy politely responded. No one hit. Deputy Sheriff Dana now appeared and told Reddy to surrender. Reddy ran. Officer Dana pursued him, and Reddy tried to escape through the rear doorway of Kenney's restaurant. As he reached the doorway his pistol again went off. Officer Dana then captured his man, who surrendered without resistance. When captured four chambers of his revolver were found to be empty and the cartridge in the fifth was dented, showing that the weapon had missed fire once. It has been asserted that Officer Dana fired at Reddy. The officer denies this, and says that he did not use his pistol at all.

The firing drew a large number of spectators all of whom manifested a great deal of interest in the proceedings but none of whom took exposed positions during the engagement.

Mr. George Turney, whose jewelry establishment is in the Wanless block, was attracted to the scene and manifested a desire to see what was going on until the firing began. He then retired temporarily to the seclusion and safety of a coal bin, from which place of vantage he occasionally protruded a cautious head.

The Wyman combination looked on calmly from the windows of their rooms. They doubtless mistook the firing at first for an informal rehersal of their own gun powder play of "Yakie."

Sergeant Conolly, of the Leadville police stood on the balcony with a revolver in his hand and his wife by his side. He did not appear agitated but seemed to be enjoying himself. It is understood that he afterwards expressed himself as quite well pleased with Colorado Springs. He was getting somewhat homesick and thought of going to Leadville, but the entertainment yesterday almost determined him to remain a few days longer. It is alleged that he remarked pleasantly that for an amateur affair the shooting was not so bad. "However," he is reported as saying, "the marksmanship of the boys was very poor, nevertheless, I think that their intentions were all right."

Postmaster Price and the clerks in his office barricaded the back door and resolved to sell their lives dearly and to defend the United States mail to the last gasp.

In the afternoon Reddy was arraigned before Justice Bently upon a charge of assault and battery. Ambrose Ramsey, the belabored pastry cook, appearing as the prosecuting witness. George Turney testified to the facts of the assault and remarked incidentally, when asked how Reddy shot, that "he shot straight ahead." When asked if he thought Reddy intended to shoot around a corner, Mr. Turney smiled. The testimony of Ramsey and the other witnesses made out a clear case against the prisoner, and Justice Bently fined him $25 and costs, the whole amounting to $42 95. Reddy did not have the money to pay his fine and was marched off to jail.

The case tried yesterday was merely that of assault and battery. No complaint has yet been made against Reddy of assault with intent to kill. It seems to us that such a complaint should be entered as the fellow, in spite of his bad marksmanship, manifested a very vicious disposition and fired point blank at Captain Graves, but fortunately missed his mark. The weapon he used was a cheap 32 calibre five chambered revolver, somewhat rusty and rather the worse for wear.

New Incorporations.

The Colorado Springs Opera House Company have filed their articles of incorporation. Their capital stock is $100,000, in $100 shares. B. F. Crowell, J. F. Humphrey and Irving Howbert are directors for the first year. B. F. Crowell, J. F. Humphrey and A. S. Welch are the incorporators.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with our county clerk, of the "Leadville, Breckenridge, and Denver Railway Co., with a capital stock of $2,500,000 in $100 shares. The object of the company is to build a narrow gauge road from Leadville to Denver. The company will do business in the counties of Lake, Summit, Park, Jefferson, Boulder, Grand, El Paso, Clear Creek, Douglass, Wells, Gilpin and Arapahoe. The principal office is in New York city, and the following gentlemen will be directors for the first year, viz: L. R. Harrision, George R. Crane and James N. Templar of Leadville; Sidney G. Miller, of Madison, New Jersey; Gouveneur Morris and George L. Schuyler, of New York; E. B. Litchfield, of Brooklyn, New York; S. Crooks, of Springfield, Mass; Wm. B. Litchfield, of Hartford, Conn.

Manager Daly Resigns.

The Leadville Democrat of yesterday contains the following concerning the resignation of the manager of the Little Chief mine: "Manager George Daly of the Little Chief mine, informed the mining reporter of the Democrat yesterday that he had telegraphed his resignation to the board of directors, to take effect September 15th, or earlier if possible. Mr. Daly stated that he had a disagreement with some of the members of the board, and that he did not care to serve the company any longer. He has remained this long at the solicitation of friends who are interested in the Little Chief mine, but recent events have caused him to take this step. He stated further that he was requested to make certain reports and statements by some of the stockholders and directors to enable them to sell their stocks, which he absolutely declined to do, and further, that his official reports of the true condition of the mine, and his protest against the forced output of July and August, were not given to the public. That some of the directors and influential stockholders suppressed the true state of affairs, and because he refused to co-operate with them and make false statements with a view of deceiving the public and bulling the stock, he has incurred their ill-will.

"Mr. Daly states that he has a great deal of property under his control here and in Ten Mile, and will continue making this headquarters."

The Leadville Democrat of yesterday has the following: "The ore shipments of the Chrysolite mine for the past four days have been as follows:

Saturday	134 tons
Sunday	333 "
Monday	107 "
Tuesday	200 "
Total for four days	774 "

The product of Saturday and Sunday, netted the company over $40,000. The shipments for a fortnight past have averaged over one hundred tons per day, and at the present rate will average over 150 tons. The ore is all of very good grade, netting from eighty to one hundred dollars per ton."
